Christmas tree ornaments

Trace each bauble on a transparent sheet or a silicone mat. Go round the outline twice, fill it with zig-zags if you want a solid piece, then draw the loop last so it fuses to the cap. Let it cool before you peel it off, and thread a ribbon through the loop.

Snowflakes

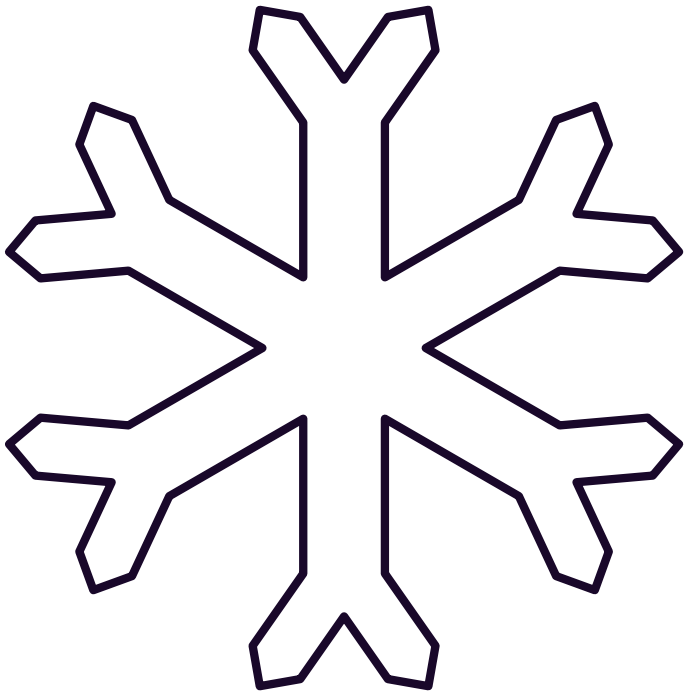

Trace the outline in one slow pass, then fill each arm with short lines across it so the flake is strong. Add a loop of plastic at the top of one arm for a ribbon, or make several and weld them to a line of plastic to make a garland.

Stand-up Christmas tree

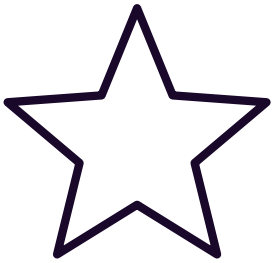

Draw and fill both halves, but leave a gap about 2 mm wide along each dashed line: that is the slot. When they are cool, slide half B down onto half A so they cross at right angles, then weld the star to the top point.

Stars and tree-topper

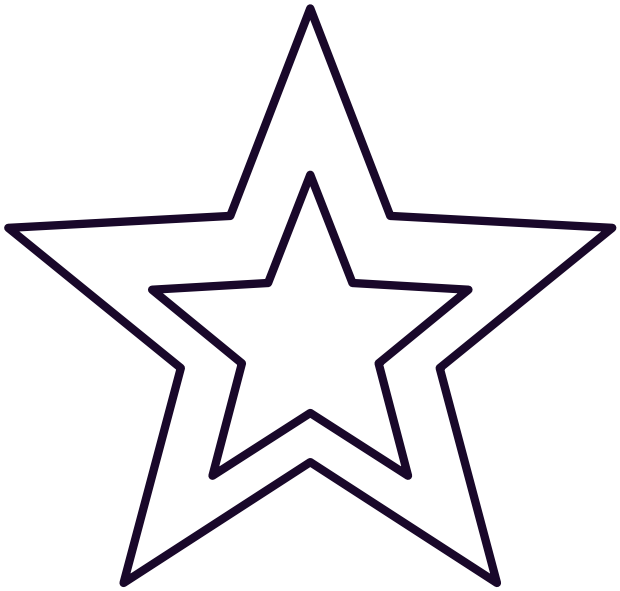

Trace the outline, then fill the star with zig-zags. For the layered star, draw the outer star, let it cool, then draw the inner star on top so it stands out. The tab of the tree-topper is welded to the back of the top of your tree.

Stocking, mitten, candy cane and bell

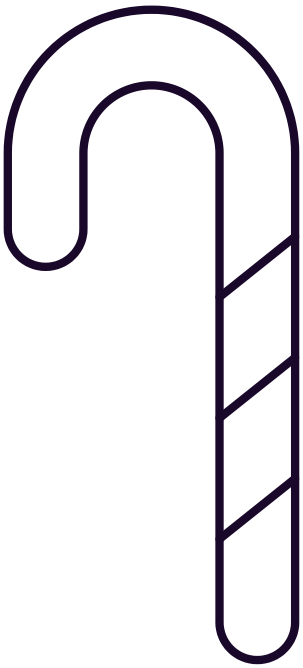

Trace each shape and fill it, then trace the details (cuffs, stripes, the band on the bell) on top in a second pass. Add a loop of plastic at the top for a ribbon and let each piece cool on the mat before you lift it.

Gingerbread person and house

These are decorations, not biscuits: trace the outlines, then add the eyes, smile, buttons, door and windows as a second layer. Weld a loop to the top of the head or the roof for a ribbon. Let everything cool before you peel it off.

Reindeer and sleigh

Trace the head outline first, then the ears, antlers, eyes and nose. Go over the antlers twice so they are thick enough to hold. For the sleigh, draw the body, then the runner and the three struts that join them, and let it cool flat before you lift it.

Merry Christmas lettering and gift tags

Trace the outline of each letter, then fill it with close lines. Join the letters of a word with a bar along the bottom so they come off as one piece. For the gift tags, keep the hole clear, write a name on the tag with the pen and tie it on with ribbon.
